End Distracted Driving

I am pleased to write this reference letter for Joel Feldman, who recently delivered a compelling presentation on distracted driving at our college. I had the pleasure of attending this event and witnessing firsthand the impact of Joel's message on our students.

Through his personal experience and work as an attorney, Joel brought a wealth of knowledge and passion to the topic. From the moment it began, it was clear that he deeply understood the issues surrounding distracted driving, including its causes, consequences, and potential solutions. The real-life stories and statistics he shared resonated with our students and staff alike, fostering a greater awareness of this critical issue. His daughter Casey was twenty-one years old when a distracted driver killed her walking across the street, so students quickly resonated with the story he told.

Even though Joel lives thousands of miles from our college, he was genuinely committed to making a difference in our community. His passion for promoting safe driving habits was evident, and it inspired attendees to reflect on their own behaviors behind the wheel. The feedback I received from participants was overwhelmingly positive, with many indicating that they felt empowered to share what they learned with others.

I wholeheartedly recommend Joel for any opportunity you have for him to visit your college campus. His expertise, enthusiasm, and dedication to educating others make him an invaluable asset for student life activities programming.
